PRESENT (THIRD) CHURCH BUILDING.
Erected 1867.

"The Lutheran church in this country is of very great power numerically and through the intelligence and thrift of its members, but it will grow steadily to even greater power. It is destined to be one of the two or three greatest churches and most important national churches in the United States; one of the two or three churches most distinctly American, among the forces that are to tell for making this great country even greater in the future. Therefore, a peculiar load of responsibility rests upon the members of this church."

Ex-President Roosevelt, in an address in Luther Place Memorial Church, Washington, D. C., January 20, 1905.

HISTORY.

GEORGETOWN—now a part of the city of Washington, D. C.—was laid out under an act of the English province of Maryland, dated June 8, 1751, which authorized commissioners “to lay out and erect a town on the Potomac River, above the mouth of Rock Creek, in Frederick County, Md.” It was incorporated December 25, 1789, by act of the General Assembly of Maryland of that date—the very year of the establishment of the government of the United States.

The act to locate the seat of the national government on the banks of the Potomac was passed by Congress and approved July 16, 1790, and under its provisions the seat of government, beginning with the year 1800, was located permanently at Washington. The authority of the government of the United States over the District of Columbia “in full and absolute right and exclusive jurisdiction as well of soil as of persons residing or to reside thereon, became vested on the first Monday of December, 1800.”^a

According to the census of 1800 the inhabitants of the city of Washington numbered 3,210, most of whom were workmen employed on the public buildings; the population of Georgetown was 2,993; and the total population of the District of Columbia, then containing 100 square miles, and including Alexandria and surrounding territory, was 14,093. It can readily be seen, therefore, that thirty-one years earlier, in 1769, when the so-called Beatty and Hawkins addition to Georgetown was laid out and a lot therein was donated to the Lutherans for church, school, and burial purposes, the population of Georgetown, including slaves, colored free-men, aliens, and all, was probably not more than between one and two thousand at most.

^aCranch's Circuit Court Reports, Vol. 1, pp. 15-21, 102.

The records of the County Clerk's office of Frederick County, Maryland, show the original grant of this property, which is still held and occupied by the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Georgetown, on the northwest corner of the streets now known as Wisconsin Avenue and Volta Place. The record reads as follows:^b

“At the request of Charles Beatty and George Fraser Hawkins, the following deed was recorded the 17th day of May, A. D. 1770, to-wit: ‘Be it known unto all persons whom it may concern that we, George Fraser Hawkins, of Prince George's County, in the Province of Maryland, and Charles Beatty, of Frederick County and Province aforesaid, gentlemen, having purchased part of a tract of land called Knaves' Disappointment, lying and being in Frederick County, in the Province aforesaid, and adjoining Georgetown, formerly the property of Mr. George Gordon, late of Frederick County, deceased, and now conveyed to us for 208 acres and five-sixteenths of an acre, we, for the enlargement of Georgetown aforesaid and for the general public benefit, have laid off the said land into 304 lots or parcels of ground, divided by proper streets and lanes, as by a particular plot hereto annexed will more fully appear. Four of said lots we give to public uses, to-wit: one for building on, a church for the use of the Church of England, one for a Calvinist church, one for a Lutheran church, and the other for a market house, as specified in said plot, which said four lots, together with all the streets and lanes, as specified in said plot, we hereby alien, enfeoff, release and confirm and by these presents do alien, enfeoff, release, confirm and make over to the public for their use the said lots, streets and lanes forever. To have and to hold the same without any molestation of us or either of us, or our or either of our heirs, or assigns, or any person or persons whatsoever claiming by, from, or under us, them or any of them, and for the remaining 300 lots we have concluded to dispose of them by way of lottery to consist of 300 tickets to be drawn in presence of Messrs. Adam Stewart, Thomas Johns, William Deakins, Jr., and Jeremiah Turner, trustees and managers appointed by us for drawing said lottery, who are to act on oath; the several indentures" (adventurers (?)) "paying us ten pounds currency per ticket and to receive the several lots drawn against the number of each ticket; we to survey the said lots and stake them at each corner and give sufficient deeds of conveyance to the several indentures" (adventurers (?)), "(subject to a ground rent of one penny sterling per lot per annum), when we shall be called thereto, as also, at our own proper cost and charge, to have this instrument of writing, together with the plot hereto annexed, recorded in the public records of Frederick County aforesaid, and a duplicate of said plot lodged in the hands of the Commissioners or Trustees for Georgetown for the time being. And for the faithful performance of the above, we hereby bind ourselves, our heirs, executors and administrators in the penalty of 5,000 pounds current money.

"Signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of Thomas Price, Zeph. Turner.

"At the like request, the following plan or plot of the addition to Georgetown was recorded on the same day, the same plot or plan being annexed to the above deed."

The plot on file, in accordance with the above statement, marks the lot on the northwest corner of Fourth and High Streets, now Volta Place and Wisconsin Avenue, respectively, "for the Lutheran Church."

Another record of importance and interest to our congregation is an act passed by the Legislature of Maryland, December 31, 1796, authorizing commissioners to survey certain streets, lanes and lots in said Beatty and Hawkins' addition to Georgetown, and to establish and fix permanent boundaries. This act sets forth that the streets and lots in this addition were originally laid out in 1769. The United States Supreme Court, in reviewing our title to this property in 1829, also gave the date of the original grant of this property to us as in 1769. The lots were laid out, therefore, and our lot was donated to the Lutheran church some months before any papers in the case were put on file. A log church was at once erected on this lot by the German Lutherans who lived in Georgetown and along Rock Creek, and services were conducted more or less irregularly by various non-resident ministers, whose services from time to time could be secured; and this structure thus antedated any other Lutheran church or parochial school building in what is now the District of Columbia by 64 years. Tradition says that George Washington attended at least one service in this church. The founder of Georgetown Presbyterianism, Rev. Stephen Bloomer Balch, D. D., held his first services for his people in this Lutheran church about 1780. The church appears to have been under the fostering care of the famous Lutheran missionary preachers—the Muhlenbergs. Rev. Peter Muhlenberg, the “fighting parson” of Woodstock, Va., made missionary tours in many directions seeking to gather together the scattered members of his faith. For a time, in 1779, owing to their inability to secure a Lutheran pastor, the congregation was served by an Episcopal minister of the name of Brooke. A German minister from Philadelphia served them during part of the year 1796. Another German minister was secured in 1799. The difficulty of securing permanent pastoral oversight will be well understood when it is borne in mind that in that age the number of Lutherans in what is now the United States was but a few thousand. They had but few ministers, and not a single denominational college or theological seminary in the country from which to draw for pastors, as the first Lutheran theological seminary in the United States—that at Hartwick, N. Y.—was founded in 1797.

The lot thus donated to us was exempt from taxation from the time of the original grant. It was used from the start for burial purposes, and three of the oldest tombstones still standing near the present church tell the story of life and death in the latter part of the eighteenth century. Their early inscriptions read as follows:

“Died 1778, October 15th. Here Lyeth the Body of Margeret Hermon. Age, 70.”

“In memory of Mary Morris, Daughter of Randal and Rebekah Morris. Born June 1, 1792. Died Sept. 10, 1793.”

“In memory of Elizabeth Morris, Daughter of Randal and Rebekah Morris. Born Jan. 10, 1795. Died June 25, 1796.”

In 1825 Daniel Kurtz, Daniel Bussard, and John Goszler, Trustees of this German Lutheran Church of Georgetown, entered suit against Charles A. Beatty and John T. Ritchie, seeking a settlement of the title and the issuance of an injunction against them prohibiting their removal of tombstones, disturbing the congregation's peaceful possession and enjoyment of the church property, and praying for general relief. Upon hearing in the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia and County of Washington, said Court, in 1826, decreed a perpetual injunction against the defendants,^c who then appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States. This latter Court, the highest in our country, affirmed the decree of the Circuit Court, confirming to the congregation its perpetual use and enjoyment of the property still occupied on the corner of Wisconsin Avenue and Volta Place. So far as we know, this is the only church property in the entire General Synod, the title to which has been passed on by the United States Supreme Court.

In delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court in this case, in January, 1829, Justice Joseph Story reviewed the following historical facts:

“Georgetown was erected into a town, by an act of the legislature of Maryland, passed in 1751, ch. 25. By subsequent acts, additions were made to the territorial limits of the town; and the town was created a corporation, with the usual municipal officers, by an act of the Maryland legislature, passed in 1789, ch. 23.

* * * * *

“In the year 1769, Charles Beatty and George F. Hawkins laid out a town, known by the name of Beatty and Hawkins's addition to Georgetown, and which is now included within its corporate limits. The lots of this addition were disposed of by way of lottery, under the direction of commissioners appointed to lay out the same, and conduct the drawing of the lottery. The books of the lottery and the plan of the lots, and a connected survey thereof, were afterwards, by act passed in 1796, ch. 54, ordered to be recorded in the clerk's office for the territory of Columbia, and copies thereof to be good evidence in all courts of law and equity in the state. Upon the original plan, so recorded, one lot was marked out and inscribed with these words, 'for the Lutheran Church.'

"It is proved, that, shortly after the appropriation, and more than fifty years ago" (these words were written in 1829) "the Lutherans of Georgetown proceeded to erect a log-house on the lot, which was used as a church for public worship, by that denomination of Christians; and was also occasionally, and at different times since, used as a schoolhouse, under their direction. That at a much later period, a steeple and bell were added to the building; that the land was used as a churchyard; that a sexton appointed by Lutherans had the direction of it; that more than half of the lot is covered with graves; and others, as well as Lutherans, have been buried there; that the Lutherans have caused the lot to be inclosed, from time to time, as the fences fell into decay, and procured subscriptions for that purpose; that the possession of the Lutherans, in the manner in which it was exercised over the lot, by erecting a house, by public worship, by inclosing the ground, and by burials, was never questioned by Charles Beatty in his lifetime, nor any manner disturbed, until a short period before the commencement of the present suit. That Charles Beatty, in his lifetime constantly avowed, that the lot was appropriated for the Lutherans, and that they were entitled to it.

"The Lutherans have constituted but a small number in the town of Georgetown; they have not been able, therefore, to maintain public worship constantly in the house so erected, during the whole period; and sometimes, it has been intermitted for a considerable length of time. But efforts have been constantly made, so far as practicable, to keep together a congregation, to use the means of divine worship, and to support public preaching. The house, however, in consequence of inevitable decay, fell down some time ago; the exact period of which, however, does not appear; but it seems to have been more than forty years after its first erection. Efforts have since been made to rebuild it, but hitherto they have not been successful. The Lutherans in Georgetown who have possessed the lot in question, are not, and never have been, incorporated as a religious society. The congregation has consisted of a voluntary society, acting, in its general arrangement, by committees and trustees, chosen from time to time by the Lutherans belonging to it. There do not appear to have been any formal records kept of their proceedings; and there have been periods of considerable intermission in their appointment and action."^d

In this suit, the trustees in 1826 declared "themselves to be trustees of and agents for the German Lutheran Church, composed of the members of the German Lutheran Church of Georgetown, duly organized as such." The court unquestionably recognized that an organized, unincorporated Lutheran congregation existed here as early as 1769, and that this congregation held the lot in question both by grant and possession.

But few names of the early Lutherans of Georgetown have come down to us, as no official church or pastoral records of those years are now in existence. One name, however, of nearly a century ago, stands out clearly and prominently, in college, in the gospel ministry, and in the field of science alike. William H. Smith, the son of Lewis Smith, was born in Georgetown, D. C., October 8, 1816. He entered the Gettysburg, Penna., Gymnasium, and pursued his studies until his graduation in 1834—thus being a member of the first graduating class of what is now ^dSee the case of "Charles A. Beatty and John T. Ritchie, Appellants, vs. Daniel Kurtz and others, Trustees of the German Lutheran Church of Georgetown, Appellees," United States Reports, Vol. 27 (Peters 2), p. 565 et seq. The original records in this case are to be found in the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the Capitol.

Pennsylvania College, the oldest Lutheran College in the United States, on which occasion he delivered the Latin salutatory. This was the first Lutheran college commencement in America, and its date was September 17, 1834. Mr. Smith entered the Lutheran ministry, and served congregations at Charleston, S. C., as assistant to Rev. Dr. J. Bachman; at Barren Hill, Penna.; St. Louis, Mo., and Baltimore, Md. He received the degree of Doctor of Medicine, but when and where we have not been able to ascertain. In 1840 he was married to Caroline C. Trescott, of Charleston, S. C. Interested in scientific studies, he devoted special attention to chemistry and electricity, and made a number of inventions, one of which was for the utilization of iron furnace slag, particularly for paving purposes. It was while visiting London, England, seeking the introduction of this invention there, that he died.

The log church of 1769 having fallen into decay, after a lapse of some years a second building—a frame structure—was erected about the year 1835. This was used, like the first building, more or less irregularly as a house of worship and, perhaps, as a parish school as well at times, up to a period within the memory of people still living, as it was still standing at the time of the Civil War.

The Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Maryland and the General Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in the United States of America were both organized in 1820, at which time it is estimated there were but 170 pastors, 850 congregations, and 35,000 communicant members in the Lutheran Church in the entire United States. The Georgetown congregation continued its independent and struggling existence for another half century before it became connected with any synod, and received no assistance from other congregations or from the Maryland Synod, on whose territory it was located.

At the annual convention of that Synod held at Frederick, Md., in 1842, the committee on the president's annual report declared it to be their opinion "that there are several other stations even within the bounds of our own Synod, which should be occupied as missionary grounds; and if so occupied and aided but partially for a year or two, they would then be able to sustain ministers of themselves, and become important auxiliaries in co-operating with us in extending the Redeemer's kingdom. They allude to Baltimore City and County, Washington City and Georgetown in the District of Columbia, and Frederick and Carroll Counties."

In the light of this recommendation, the following resolution was adopted by the said convention:

"Whereas, for various reasons it is deemed important that missionary stations should be established in Washington City and Georgetown, D. C., with a view to the future formation of English Lutheran churches there, therefore,

"Resolved, that our worthy brother, Rev. Dr. Muller, is hereby authorized to proceed to said places and pursue such measures as he may consider proper and in accordance with the views of this Synod, to commence a missionary station in each place; and as we entertain entire confidence in his piety and prudence, he is herewith recommended to the attentions of our Lutheran brethren and those friendly to our church in Washington and Georgetown, in the hope that they will co-operate with him in the accomplishment of the purpose in view."

In accordance with these instructions, the Rev. A. A. Muller, D. D., organized St. Paul's English Lutheran Church, corner of 11th and H Streets, N. W., in 1843,^e but took no steps to strengthen the Georgetown work.

Two years later, when Rev. J. G. Butler, D. D., was its pastor, the Maryland Synod met in the new St. Paul's Church, and passed the following resolution:

^eTen years before this, in 1833, Concordia Church, corner of 20th and G Streets, N. W., was organized on the basis of a combination of the Lutheran and the Reformed faiths, but its services were held in the German language.

“Resolved, that the officers of Synod be a committee to examine into property which is believed to belong to the Lutheran Church in Georgetown.”

The minutes of this body for the following years, however, do not make any further reference to this appointment or give any report from this committee; and the Georgetown Lutherans continued their struggling existence alone for two more decades. The small frame church erected about 1835 continued its humble but faithful service, but without any regular permanent or resident pastoral or synodical oversight, down into the sixties, as people yet living distinctly recall its existence then.

In 1864 Rev. Dr. Butler, then president of Maryland Synod, recommended to that body “that Georgetown and Alexandria” (among other places), “both flourishing cities, the latter destined to become one of the chief commercial cities of the Old Dominion, and in neither of which our church has a representative, should not be neglected.” It was thereupon unanimously resolved by the Synod: “That Brother Butler and his people be encouraged to prosecute the work of establishing mission churches in Washington, Georgetown and Alexandria, and that these missions, as soon as established, be recommended to the fostering care of the executive committee of the Home Missionary Society.”

The first definite move, however, towards a permanent formal organization of the Georgetown Lutherans came from another direction. On June 24, 1866, at the residence of Henry A. Kaiser, a German Lutheran congregation was formally organized with the purpose of continuing the work of the church on the Georgetown property and making use of it. There were ten charter members, namely: George F. Wetzrich, H. B. Wisner, John Kaiser, Henry A. Kaiser, T. Rosenbusch, J. C. Kaiser, Charles Memmert, Conrad Wolz, Gottlieb Hurlebaus, and George Kraft. They elected John Kaiser president, George F. Wetzrich secretary, and Charles Memmert treasurer. Eleven other gentlemen soon afterward joined the organization: W. Hucles, John Hoelmann, John F. Winkel, John Wagner, Wm. Vogt, ——— Pimper, A. Ackershausen, John Ackershausen, George Schlosser, Charles Altmansberger, and Valentine Maenger.

On June 27, 1867, James Gossler, Henry C. Kaiser, H. B. Wisner, J. C. Kaiser and George F. Wetzrich were elected by the congregation, and on the 22d of the following month were properly confirmed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia as trustees of the German Lutheran Congregation of Georgetown, D. C. It was decided to build a one-story brick building for church and parochial school purposes; and Rev. Samuel D. Finckel, D. D., then pastor of Concordia Lutheran Church, of this city, was chosen pastor of the congregation. The contract for the new building was given to R. Hazel, of Georgetown, for the sum of $2,750. The building was to be 28 feet wide and 45 feet long. The cornerstone of this third church built on this site was laid Monday, September 2, 1867, by the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the District of Columbia, with the historical gavel used by George Washington in laying the cornerstone of the U. S. Capitol. The Evening Star of September 3, 1867, gives the following account of this interesting event :

"AFFAIRS IN GEORGETOWN. CORNERSTONE LAYING.

"About 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone of the new German Lutheran chapel and school house took place at the corner of High and Fourth Streets. At 5 o'clock the children of the Sabbath School met at Harmony Hall, on Greene Street, and forming in procession, headed by the Marine Band under Professor Scala, marched to Masonic Hall on High Street, where the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the District were in waiting, and the line taking up its march, proceeded to the building site. The exercises opened with an ode by the German Saengerbund of Washington, under the leadership of Charles Richter, after which the Rev. S. D. Finckel offered up a feeling prayer. The same gentleman delivered an eloquent address reviewing the history of the Lutheran Church, and closed with a few remarks in the German language. Mr. Finckel was followed by a beautiful ode by the Masonic Choir, under the directorship of Mr. Dawson. The imposing ceremonies of laying the stone with Masonic honors, under the conductorship of Deputy Grandmaster Donaldson, then took place, and was witnessed by hundreds of ladies and gentlemen inside and outside the enclosure. At the conclusion of the Masonic exercises the choir sang a hymn, and, after music by the Marine Band and prayer and benediction by Rev. Mr. Finckel, the exercises closed with singing by the Washington Saengerbund. Many Knight Templars from Washington were present in regalia. The stone contained specimens of German and American silver coin, United States fractional currency, and the names of the trustees and copies of German publications, and a copy of the Star and other journals. The building of the church is to be pushed to rapid completion. It is located on the site of a very old burial place, and the headstones, many of them dated early in the last century, will be preserved in their places."

The following further facts as to this cornerstone laying are given in another Washington newspaper of same date as the above. Rev. Dr. Finckel's sermon on the occasion was based on the text: "Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy house, and the place where Thine honour dwelleth" (Psalms xxvi:8). A history of the church from its foundation and a copy of Luther's catechism were also deposited in the cornerstone. The fund already raised by the liberal subscriptions of the German Lutherans to the work was considerably augmented by contributions received at the cornerstone laying from those assembled to witness the ceremonies. The original intention appears to have been to complete the structure in three months, and hold church and Sunday school services in it on the Sabbath and a German school during the week; but the day school was not a very great success, and "through mismanagement, improper qualifications in some of the teachers, and want of proper support, operated to bring the school into disrepute, and prevent its being of any advantage to the church."

The services rendered this small congregation by Rev. Dr. Finckel were in connection with or in addition to his work as pastor of the Concordia Church. He did not serve or supply Georgetown very long, however, because on the 16th of November, 1868, a very pressing invitation was extended by this congregation to Rev. J. J. Suman, then living in Washington, and engaged in the government service, to preach for them. On Sunday, January 3, 1869, he received a formal call to become pastor of the church, and he accepted it. Rev. George Diehl, D. D., of Frederick, Md., president of the Maryland Synod, reported to that body at its meeting in the fall of 1869: "Rev. J. J. Suman was installed by myself on the 24th of January, as pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Georgetown. Dr. Finckel and Rev. G. L. Reitz were on the committee, but were both providentially hindered from attending." Rev. Mr. Suman was thus the first permanent pastor formally installed by authority of any synod over this little band of Lutherans tenaciously clinging to a confession of faith (the Augsburg Confession), then 339 years old, and to a Georgetown lot donated for Lutheran church purposes just a century before that installation. The pastorate was received into the Maryland Synod, and reported to that body in the fall of 1869, 25 communicant members in the church, and 10 officers and teachers, and 60 scholars in the Sunday School.

On February 27, 1870, during the ministry of Rev. Mr. Suman, it was resolved, by a vote of the trustees, that "hereafter the church building be devoted exclusively to church purposes." There was some bitter feeling over this action, as the Germans took offense at it and ceased attending church services and Sunday school; but the German day school was closed, and no German has been used since that time in church or school. One of the old heirlooms still possessed and highly prized by the congregation, coming down from its early history, is its large old German pulpit bible, printed in Tuebingen, Germany, in 1730.

On Sunday, June 5, 1870, the church, having been repainted, papered, supplied with gas, and renovated, was rededicated to the worship of Almighty God. Drs. Butler, Finckel and Bates participated in the exercises. A masonic choir led the singing on this occasion.

On October 30, 1870, an English congregation was regularly and constitutionally organized, supplanting all prior organization, with an even dozen members, beside the pastor. The list is as follows:

Rev. John J. Suman, Geo. Wetzrich, John Wagner, Henry Gross, Benjamin Keller, John W. Eli, Agnes Suman, Mrs. Margaret Macomb, Christiana Hane, Ida Easton, Kate Keller, Mrs. Gross, and Mrs. P. Emerick.

The records do not give the date of Rev. Mr. Suman's resignation, but it must have been within a few months after this organization of the strictly English congregation, inasmuch as Rev. George A. Nixdorff was invited to visit the field with a view to becoming pastor. The chronicler adds that "he visited us, was pleased, and on the first Sunday in April, 1871, he preached his first sermon as pastor of the church." He was never formally installed, however, according to the rules of the church.

At the annual meeting of the Maryland Synod, in the fall of 1871, there were reported 11 communicant members in the church, and 7 teachers and 45 scholars in the Sunday school. The reorganized congregation was received into connection with Maryland Synod, and was represented that year, 1871, by its first lay delegate, Mr. John W. Eli. At this Synod the pastor reported: "The attendance on public worship as increasing, the Sabbath school as improving, and the prayer meeting as being well attended. The little congregation manifests commendable spirit of liberality, and deserves the fostering care of Synod."

A debt of $1,800 that rested on the congregation at the beginning of Mr. Suman's pastorate was successfully paid off through the assiduous efforts of Pastors Suman and Nixdorff and a donation of $500 from Maryland Synod. Rev. Mr. Nixdorff continued as pastor until June 3, 1894, making a most faithful and self-sacrificing pastorate of more than 23 years, for he never received any financial return from this congregation through all those years. On May 29, 1886, articles of incorporation were taken out by the trustees of the congregation under the name or title of "The Evangelical Lutheran Church of Georgetown, D. C.," to continue for one hundred years. Nine years later Georgetown was merged into the city of Washington and ceased to exist as a separate corporation. The corporate name of our church, however, has continued thus far unchanged. In June, 1888, a Ladies' Aid Society was organized by Mr. Nixdorff, and its history is full of good works.

In October, 1894, Rev. Stanley Billheimer took up the work of this pastorate, reporting at that time a total of 25 communicant members in the church, and 11 officers and teachers and 45 scholars in the Sunday School. Mr. Billheimer was installed as pastor by Revs. J. G. Butler, D. D., Samuel Domer, D. D., and W. H. Gotwald, D. D., March 19, 1895. During his pastorate of ten years, ending October 31, 1904, the church membership increased to 78 communicants, and the Sunday School enrolment to 8 officers and teachers and 82 scholars; and the church property was much improved on the exterior and in the interior at a cost of about $3,000. This included new flooring and carpet, new pulpit and chancel rail, new roof and metal ceiling, stained glass windows, removal of old gallery, outside vestibule built, church repainted inside and outside, cellar dug and furnace put in, new fence built, and electric lights introduced. A Children's Mission Band was begun in 1896.

Rev. David Bittle Floyd, D. D., was called to the pastorate and took up its duties April 1, 1905, but resigned five months later, September 10, 1905, to accept a theological professorship in Susquehanna University at Selinsgrove, Penna. During his short pastorate he nevertheless rendered efficient service, added a number to the church, and introduced part of the historic Common Service.

Rev. Luther Hess Waring, Ph. D., the present pastor, began serving the congregaion as acting pastor March 1, 1906. On October 25th following, the congregation extended him a formal call, to take effect November 1st, which he accepted; and he was regularly installed as pastor November 13, 1906, by Rev. Charles Reinewald of Emmitsburg, Md., the president of Maryland Synod, who also delivered the charge to the pastor. Rev. C. F. Bergner, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church of this city, delivered the charge to the congregation. During the present pastorate the active membership and the financial operations of the church have materially increased; the benevolent contributions on synodical apportionment have been more than trebled; a parish paper has been published; the church property has been improved by the construction of an iron fence around the entire frontage of the lot, the repainting of the church interior and exterior, the purchase of new furniture, including a piano, and the establishment of a new church building fund that is already well beyond the thousand-dollar mark. All this has been accomplished, by the blessing of God, only with the support of a loyal people with a mind to work. We may well take courage and trust God for the future.
